In each of these sentences, the subject is a noun: hawk, boys, daughter, and children. The verbs in the first two sentences—soars, laugh—show action and answer the question, "What does the subject do?" The verbs in the last two sentences—is, are—are called linking verbs because they link or connect the subject with a word that renames it (wrestler) or describes it (tired).

German verbs may be classified as either weak, with a dental consonant inflection, or strong, showing a vowel gradation (). Both of these are regular systems. Most verbs of both types are regular, though various subgroups and anomalies do arise; however, textbooks for learners often class all strong verbs as irregular. The only completely irregular verb in the language is sein (to be).
