Pregnancy tests detect the presence of the hormone hCG, which is produced by the embryo after implantation. Implantation can happen anywhere from 6 – 12 days after ovulation/conception, but most of the time it happens 8 – 10 days after ovulation. Once implantation is complete, hCG levels will double roughly every 48 hours.

During early pregnancy, the HCG concentration increases rapidly — doubling every two to three days. The earlier you take the home pregnancy test, the harder it might be for the test to detect HCG. Keep in mind that the timing of your ovulation might vary from month to month, and the fertilized egg can implant in the uterus at different times.

Home pregnancy tests: Can you trust the results? - Mayo Clinic

When you get pregnant, your hCG level starts to increase. Most home tests are designed to be positive when you're two to three days late for a period (or 15 to 16 days after ovulation). If there's a faint line, there's only a small amount of hCG in your urine, usually because it's early in the pregnancy.
