A jury is unlikely to be compromised. A jury retains the morality of law. Reinforces the judiciary confidence with the public.

Is the american jury system still a good idea packet answers?

The author makes the point that Americans are attached to the jury system because that is the system they are used to. If American's had always only had bench (judge only) trials that is what they would be used to. Judges are "reasoned" and "professional" in contrast to the judgment of randomly chosen and probably uncomfortable jurors.
